NOTE.

In sending this sheet to press, the Publishers take the opportunity of adding, that, owing to the continued development of the Postal and Telegraphic system, it is impracticable in a compilation of the kind, to give effect to all the alterations involved in the numerous official changes, beyond a certain period corresponding to the Postmasters' returns. The time required to trace and adjust varying information from different quarters, and prepare the entries for press, places the volume at a great disadvantage. Notwithstanding this, however, every effort has been made to ensure accuracy, in respect of what may be ascertainable under the circumstances. The obituary and other public notices have been followed up where possible, and every doubtful entry verified as the work proceeded, so far as there were means and opportunities for doing so. The care taken with Section I., however, has not altogether prevented duplication of addresses, arising in many ways. This is observable in re-sorting the entries for Section II., where differently spelt, or differently named Residences, come together under the same occupant's name. Wherever observed, the parties concerned will be asked to rectify mistakes during the correction of the proofs of Section II. Much has been done, and will continue to be done, by correspondence and enquiry, to guard against error, and the continuity of error, and to ensure completeness. In the earlier stage of compilation this was absolutely necessary, but, as the work progressed and the labour became involved, the difficulties could only be altogether surmounted at an expenditure of time which would have unreasonably prolonged the period of publication.

It is unavoidable that there should be frequent changes in the tenancy of residences, caused by deaths, sales, and removals, at all times of the year, which there is no means of methodically ascertaining, and which the gradual enlargement of the work from its original design fifty years ago, of a "Directory to Gentlemen's Seats, Villages, etc.," has made it increasingly difficult to deal with. Continual corrections too, because of Postal or Telegraphic extensions, if attempted would but lead to confusion. Were it even possible to trace every entry so affected at various stages, adjoining residences would obviously differ in consequence of such extensions, according to their alphabetical relation in any of the Sections. [See Note at the beginning of this Section].

Notwithstanding the avoidance of the insertion of places beyond the scope of the work, there are doubtless many Villas given, in near proximity to Towns and Villages, which a County Directory is not designed to include. Such have been allowed to remain in this edition rather than that the desired completeness of the work should suffer by inadvertent omissions.

The Publishers will be glad to have any errors, caused by lapse of time or otherwise, pointed out as soon as discovered, that they may be noted for any future edition, and any recent changes of occupants indicated.
